The advertisement features three stacks of white solar power base station units on wheels. The units are arranged in three stacks of increasing height: 20 Kwh (3 units), 30 Kwh (4 units), and 50 Kwh (5 units). Each unit has a small digital display and control panel. The background shows a house and a clear sky. The text highlights features like high conversion efficiency, communication options (CAN, RS485, WIFI, 4G, Bluetooth), and BMS customization support. The units are described as having a thick shell for protection.

Overview

They convert sunlight directly into electricity without moving parts, offering a reliable and low-maintenance power generation method. Key considerations include panel efficiency, shading analysis, and structural integrity to withstand local weather conditions. EverExceed's Telecom Base Station Stacked Solar Power System provides an innovative solution by integrating solar generation with traditional grid power—helping operators achieve stable, efficient, and sustainable energy supply. The power generated by solar energy is used by the DC load of the base station computer room, and the insufficient power is supplemented by energy storage. Remote base stations and telecom towers often face significant challenges when it comes to a consistent, reliable power supply. Though solar energy is not the primary power source for telecommunication, it is used as a supplemental source. In this aspect, solar energy systems can be very important to meet this. As global energy demands soar and businesses look for sustainable solutions, solar energy is making its way into unexpected places—like communication base stations. By integrating solar power systems into these critical infrastructures, companies can reduce dependence on traditional energy sources.
